

My Sharings

Experiences and reflections, the essence of life, in my opinion. With this belief, I signed up for this tour to Brighton, hoping that it enriches my experiences. And my goal is reached.

In these two weeks, I felt like crossing the threshold to another world, gasping at the differences between the life in HK and that in UK in all aspects. In school life,

I realised that teachers and students could be so close (relationships between) that no boundaries seemed to exist. While kayaking, I realised that trust between teammates was so crucial that our success depended largely on it. While playing in the disco, I realised that the brilliance emanated from youth was not to be pressed down. While being stunned visiting the Devil's Dyke and the Seven Sisters, I realised that the beauty of nature was imposing and grandiose.

Now sitting in the garden of my host family, feeling breezes stroking my face, looking back and reflecting on this trip, I realised that my goal has been reached. And I smiled heartily, gazing upon the brilliant afterglow of sunset.
